Dr Robinson graduated from Medicine at Sydney University in 2004. Her training in Obstetrics and Gynaecology was based out of Royal North Shore Hospital. Her fellowship to the Australian College of Obstetrics and Gynaecology was achieved in 2014.

Since then Dr Robinson has built up a busy and diverse practice in general gynaecology and obstetrics, both public and private. Her gynaecology practice includes specialising in prolapse management and repair, with regular voluntary work for Open Heart International and their yearly visits to Nepal to help women with prolapse.

As well as patient care, Dr Robinson regularly teaches medical students, midwifery students and junior doctors.
