Dr Andrew Pickering trained initially in the UK. Andy then commenced postgraduate training at Leicester and Leeds before relocating to Sydney where he completed further training at Royal North Shore Hospital culminating in being awarded Fellowship of the Royal Australian and New Zealand College of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists (FRANZCOG).

Pregnancy Care

Dr Pickering uses his experience in both the NHS and Public Health care here in Australia to support women in all their birth choices. Andy is happy supporting both high and low-risk mothers through their journey into motherhood. Andy recognises the importance of caring for women experiencing complications of early pregnancy and is happy to arrange urgent consults in this area. Dr Pickering supports all options available for management of early pregnancy complications, including surgical, medical and conservative management.

Gynaecology

Dr Pickering is happy to consult on a full range of gynaecological conditions including:

- Menstrual disorders
- Contraception
- Abnormal Cervical Screening Test (Colposcopy)
- Menopause
- Pelvic Organ Prolapse

Andy has an interest in Minimally Invasive Gynaecology, Gynaecological Laparoscopy and Endometriosis.

Andy actively involves himself in the teaching of medical student and doctors in training and is a Clinical Lecturer at the University of Sydney and Notre Dame University.
