I completed my training in paediatrics and paediatric cardiology in the UK. I also worked as a paediatric cardiology fellow for a year in Pittsburgh, USA and following that completed a year as a clinical research fellow in paediatric heart failure and cardiac transplantation.

I relocated to Australia in 2015 and have been employed as a staff specialist in paediatric cardiology at both Children's Hospital Westmead and Sydney Children's Hospital, Randwick since January 2015. I also have a position as a senior clinical lecturer for the University of Sydney. I am able to provide care for babies, children and adolescents with all forms of cardiac problems or cardiac symptoms and can also provide screening services for children whose family members have significant cardiac diagnoses such as cardiomyopathies.

Part of the assessment of new patients usually includes an echocardiogram which I perform myself and I subsequently arrange for other cardiac investigations as indicated. I have experience in the management of all forms of congenital heart disease and cardiac presentations from infancy to adulthood with additional experience in the management of paediatric heart failure and pulmonary hypertension.
